The Capitol of New Mexico.

THE NEW CAPITOL

First Story Now Up--Structure Will Be a Master Conception of Advanced Building Art.

Monument to New Mexico's Advancement and a Credit to the Board of Capitol Rebuilding Com-

The first story of the new capitol building is practically completed, so far as the masonry and stone work is concerned, and a look behind the high wall that jealously guards the structure from the casual gaze and surrounds the convicts engaged in molding the rough product of New Mexican hills into a floor of the building, the grand stairway beautiful conception of builder's art, shows the beholder a marvelous palace in the chrysalis, a monument to New trances lead to the main facade. The Mexican enterprise, fast developing from the germ into architectural grandeur.

Between 50 and 60 convicts are embrick, plaster, stone cutting, etc., and from 10 to 12 skilled laborers are engaged in dressing the rough stone. Working the Stone,

Nearly all of the stone used on the first floor was worked over from the old building It is difficult to secure stone of sufficient length at present, because the quarry which furnished the stone for the old building is exhausted and the new quarry at Lamy is not opened thoroughly It is difficult to secure stone of enough to supply eight-foot lengths. The stone used is a buff sandstone, very The stone used is a buff sandstone, very soft and easily worked, but it hardens by exposure. The work of handling the stone is very easy and economical. It is unloaded from the flat cars by derricks and placed on dummy cars, which are run under the steam saws, and there dressed for immediate use. There is very little work on the stone necessary after it leaves the dressing saws. The saws, seven in number, have a capacity of cutting 4.500 square feet of stone per upon this monument to their civilizaof cutting 4,500 square feet of stone per day, and receive their power from a 15-

How the Work is Checked

Architect Rapp's office is the reposi-tory for files of diagrams and specifications, and as fast as each stone is cut according to the figures given, the cor-responding figure on the diagram is checked off, thus preventing duplicates of stones and keeping a close check on the amount of work accomplished each in having secured the services of men day. Full-sized drawings of the mold courses are made in the architect's capitol rebuilding commissioners. Major offices and from these, tin patterns are cut for use in obtaining exact reproduc-tions in size from the stone. The brick walls are likewise laid out by systematic measurement and the possibility of er-ror in construction is entirely elimin-ated. It is estimated that 2,000,000 brick and 12,000 feet of stone will be used in the work of construction.

Inasmuch as the work was delayed during the months of January and February, owing to bad weather and trouble with the guards, the fact that the boiler room, coal cellars, brick and stone work for the basement and first floor are completed, speaks well for the push and energy of the architect. Mr. Rapp states that, barring delays in procuring stone, the building will be ready for occupancy by the Thirty-third legislative assembly.

Assignment of Offices.

The northwest corner of the first floor will be occupied by the territorial treas-urer, who will have two large rooms and a vault at his disposal; in the northeast corner the auditor will occupy three rooms and a vault; the southwest corner will be placed at the disposal of the governor and will contain two large rooms a vault and closets, and the southeast corner will be used by the secretary, with three large rooms and a vault. The with three large rooms and a vault. The rear center portion of the floor will be used by the superintendent of public instruction, while other available space will be utilized by toilet rooms, janitor's rooms and storage rooms.

The north wing of the second floor will be devoted to the council chamber, committee rooms, lobby rooms, etc., the south wing will contain the supreme court room, judge's private room, clerk of the supreme court rooms, closets, etc.

rooms, clerk's office, postoffice, vaults, tollet rooms, etc.

The Interior Furnishings.

The interior furnishings of the building will be in accord with the most refined tastes of the architect and carver. The legislative hall will present the colonial style of stately architecture. Numerous pilasters will support the arcade over the gallery and the groined celling will be relieved by artistic panels. The hall is 22 feet in height. The public entrance is from the front of the main corridor, which also contains a staircase leading to the main gallery. The entrance for the angeler and members is from the speaker and speaker and speaker and speaker and speaker and

The building will contain all modern improvements, such as telephones, tele-graph instruments, fire proof vaults, sanitary closets, etc. Pure air will be provided by ventilating fans which de-rive their source from under the main entrance and force the impure air through ventilators in the dome. Steam heating apparatus of most improved battern will regulate the temperature of

An Imposing Exterior.

The specifications show a beautiful as well as imposing exterior. The building will have 176 feet of frontage and 77 feet of depth. The height of the first floor is 14 feet, the second 13 feet six inches, and the third 12 feet six inches. The distance from the top lantern above the dome, to the grade, is 102 feet.

Five heavy brick walls, extending from the foundation to the roof, divide the building into compartments, thus making it absolutely fire-proof.

The exterior finish shows a well de fined Veneasance effect. The approach to the main facade is along a broad terrace to massive steps leading to the portico. extending 44 feet from the building and having 30 feet width. Two other enenriched pediment is supported by im-mense columns, which give the front an imposing aspect. Above the first story which is finished entirely in cut stone ployed in the work of carrying stone and the building will be faced with buff Roman brick, a heavy cornice and frieze girding the entire structure. Resting on a huge diaz, which is also arranged to receive groups of statuary, will be the dome, 36 feet in diameter, which will be surmounted by a group of columns forming the lantern and supporting the flag staff. The main tympanum will carry the seal of the territory carved in stone. Ten tons of steel beams will add to the solidity of the structure and when completed it will be as thoroughly up-to-date and firm as a $2,000,000 building.

ton will reflect a glorious light upon the names of the early statesmen, responsible for its creation without disgracing the history of the territory with an annual of bribery and corruption. The entire cost of the building will not exceed $75,000 in cash and convict labor, and the value of the brick furnished by the penitentiary will furnish a like amount to the work:

This is unprecedented in the work of constructing large state and territorial capitol buildings.

The territory is exceedingly fortunate in having secured the services of men capitol rebuilding commissioners. Major R. J. Palen, of Santa Fe; Hon. F. A. Manzanares, of Las Vegas; Hon. W. S. Hopewell, of Hillsboro, and W. H. Pope, Esq., are gentlemen to whom the New MEXICAN points with just pride. They have provided the territory with a home for its archives and officers worthy of the most advanced commonwealth, and their scrupulous honesty is worthy of emulation by all political servants of this great nation. The building they will provided at a cost of $75,000 in cash and $75,000 in labor and material from the penitentiary, could, not be duplicated elsewhere for $300,000 and it will serve as a historic reminder for all time, that the territory owes them a debt of gratitude and demands respect for their sterling qualifications and untiring efforts in be-qualifications and untiring efforts in behalf of the people.

Too much praise cannot be bestowed upon Messrs. I. H. and W. M. Rapp, the architects, and I. H. Rapp, superintendent of the work. It is hoped this remarkable accomplishment will be a sufficient recommendation to pave the way for future contracts that will assure them boundless wealth. Their ability is
